Emergency resuscitation equipment from Wormald

Leading fire protection specialist Wormald offers a range of fire protection equipment, systems and fire safety training suitable for the mining industry.

The GCE Sabre Medical Manual & Automatic Resuscitation System (MARS) is part of Wormald's life safety and rescue equipment portfolio and Wormald is the exclusive GCE trained service provider for the system in Australia and New Zealand.

Particularly suitable for the mining industry, the Sabre MARS offers both manual and automatic resuscitation modes and is based around two central components – the control module and the patient valve. The gas supply is passed through the automatic channel and delivered to the patient as a specific breathing programme, according to the chosen flow rate.

With the demand valve delivering 100% oxygen, the system is ideal for use in irrespirable atmospheres, such as underground mines. An optional oxygen cylinder connector with either a 2 pin index or DIN thread provides added versatility, allowing it to be attached to a range of different cylinders.
